In a truly pastoral corner of the berkshires, the art-centric village of Williamstown, Massachusetts, has a lot to brag about in terms of visual arts and theater. The newest, brightest jewel in its crown is the transformation of The Clark Art Institute (simply referred to as "The Clark") into an active campus starring the architecture of Pritzker Prize-winning architect Tadao Ando. Start your tour at Ando's Visitor Center, a contemporary building of granite, concrete and glass that seamlessly inhabits the landscape. Then view world-class paintings, sculpture and decorative arts in the expanded Museum Building, with renovations designed by Selldorf Architects of New York. Outside, check out the one-acre reflecting pool before taking a stroll — and picnicking — along two miles of walking trails. Clarkart.edu
